Dairy One Board of Directors Reorganize Districts - Fall 2005

Dairy One has seen substantial geographical growth over the past several years. With the growth, the board of directors has felt it was important to have wide member representation on the board. For example, when Dairy One and Pennsylvania DHIA came together to form a single organization, the two boards were melded into a single unit and all board members continued to serve. However, the combined board recognized that a board of directors with over 25 people was larger than necessary for the long term.

Through focused strategic planning, the board decided that an appropriate number for the board to balance member representation and cost was a board of 18 to 20 members. The plan was to reach this goal through attrition over time. During the past two years a number of board members have exited the industry providing an opportunity for the board to downsize and redistrict, according to their original plan. The board recently reached its goal of having 19 directors – 16 from member districts and three representing member organizations.

The responsibilities of a director are to represent member interests and to strategically guide Dairy One. The board is made up of a group of diverse, dedicated farmers committed to leading Dairy One successfully into the future. Feel free to contact the board member representing your area with input you may have.
